LAS FARMACIAS EN LA RED, INSEGURAS

Denuncian que el 62% de los fármacos que se venden por internet son ilegales

Jesús Martínez ADN

 "Ahorre un 70% en medicamentos de marca", anuncia una farmacia virtual en su web, traducida a siete idiomas. Oferta medicamentos para remediar todos los males, desde las alteraciones mentales (Zyprexa) a la enfermedad del Alzheimer (Reminyl), pasando por elixires y brebajes para combatir la calvicie. Muchos de estos productos requieren prescripción médica, pero si paga con dólares, se hace la vista gorda. Según un estudio de la Alianza Europea para el Acceso a Medicamentos Seguros (EAASM), el 62% de los medicamentos que se venden en la red son fraudulentos.

Para la realización del informe se ha indagado en un centenar de farmacias virtuales. Sólo el 5% de ellas opera legalmente en el mercado. La EAASM apremia al ciudadano

Top 5

1 EVITAR LAS WEB. Las recomendaciones del Ministerio de Sanidad y Consumo se reducen básicamente a una: no comprar medicamentos con receta fuera del canal oficial farmacéutico ya que supone un riesgo para la salud.

2 EN REGLA. Ante una farmacia en línea se debe comprobar que se trata de un establecimiento homologado y registrado. En todo momento tiene que ser identificable el contacto.

3 SIEMPRE CON RECETA. Los medicamentos se deben entregar siempre bajo prescripción médica, es decir, con receta, o bien con control farmacéutico.

kraftbomb: go team CRAFT

well I first must say that my internet has been semi down for the last week. We got switched over to a new network and its been funny ever since- disconnecting every 1 minute on the dot and then slowing way way down, then speeding up too fast for our modem to handle. (but don't worry, the problem is being fixed and we are getting major discounts and a new modem from our internet service provider, so they aren't really that bad)

ANYWAY, Posting has been tricky and reading blogs has been even worse. Thanks for bearing with me loyal friends and still

Apron Tutorial Featuring Dogwood Fabrics

I was once again a very busy lady on Friday. I'm not sure where all the focus and energy came from, but I'm sure glad it did, because I knocked this darling apron out without a hitch.

This is my first apron... I know how popular they are these days, and I've seen some wonderfully complex, fancy and detailed examples out there. While I don't pretend to have a very complicated pattern, I was pretty darn proud of myself for my pattern-making and sewing prowess on my first attempt. You can download the .pdf tutorial hereand it will reside in my downloads tab over on the left

lunes 20 de octubre de 2008

Por fin es lunes!

Desde que voy a las quedadas de Bonknits los lunes ya no son iguales, y para quien quiera comprobarlo el próximo lunes día 27 de octubre nos podrá encontrar a partir de las 1800h en la planta baja de la Horxatería Valenciana (calle Aribau esquina Diputación).

Este lunes no fuimos tantos como el pasado, pero la verdad es que haciendo el recuento salen más personas de las que parecían estar sentadas en la mesa. Hoy por orden alfabético:

Albis volvía a traer el jersey que le está tejiendo a su padre con la admirada Katia Merino Sport en color granate y elegida por el destinatario, comprada en Llanes Travessera.

Belen está últimamente muy productiva y sino mirad lo avanzado que estaba el bolso que decidió plagiar de Martins el pasado viernes en ovillos. El lunes que viene seguro que lo tendrá terminado! A parte

An update of autumn at the farm. Enjoy these photos!

Autumn is very colorful this year in the Northeast, and one of the nicest things to do in the fall is to drive through the countryside and observe the spectacular, vivid shades of leaves.

Do you ever wonder why certain kinds of trees put on such a brilliant display? Well, during the growing season, most tree leaves are green because of the presence of a pigment called chlorophyll. Chlorophyll is used by plants to capture sunlight needed for photosynthesis, the process that enables the plants to manufacture their own food. The chlorophyll content is so high during the summer months that its strong green color masks all other pigments that are present in the leaf. As the days grow shorter and temperatures get cooler, chlorophyll production slows and eventually stops, exposing the other hues.

The other pigments are mainly carotenoids, which provide yellow, orange, and brown colors. Anthocyanins, which give the red and purple colors, are produced in the fall, in response to autumnal bright light and sugars in the leaf.

Autumn color is greatly influenced by temperature and moisture. A rainy summer followed by crisp, sunny days seems to bring on the best show of colors. But nature is mysterious, and fall is often gorgeous even when there has been a drought.

Education in Telecenters

Evolution of Internet Public Access Points?

Example #1 (I)

Option #1: Course on Electronic Administration

- → Goal: Empowering stay-at-home moms
- → Activity: Course on web browsing
- → Activity: Use of Public Administration portals
- → Result: After course, stay-at-home moms do not browse Public Administration portals

Example #1 (II)

Option #2: Cooking course

→ Goal: Empowering stay-at-home moms

→ Activity: Cooking receipts

→ Activity: Search the web for receipts

- → Result: Stay-at-home moms browse the web for receipts
- → Result: Stay-at-home moms (maybe) end up finding other uses for the Internet and (maybe) end up setting an appointment with the doctor through the Internet... or buy online... or they chat with their grandsons...

Example #2 (I)

Option #1: Course on e-Commerce

- → Goal: Empowering couch-potato dads
- → Activity: Course on web browsing
- → Activity: Usage of e-commerce
- → Result: Couch-potato dads do not buy grocieries online, neither perform e-banking transactions...
- → Result: Couch-potato dads go to the pub to see the match on their fabulous flat screen with all their friends

Example #2 (II)

Option #2: Agreement with the local football-team fan-club

- → Goal: Empowering couch-potato dads
- → Activity: Showcast football matches in streaming
- → Activity: "Round table" using information from the Internet
- → Result: Couch-potato dads see the match... on the Net
- → Result: Couch-potato dads buy tickets online, find other usage of the Internet and (maybe) discover e-banking... or the supermarket's website... or fix an appointment with their doctor...

Telecenter 2.0 and community building

- The Telecenter as a part of the network and in the Net: the telecenter as another node inclusion of the telecenter in the community
- Digital literacies to be in the community: technological and informational media and multimedia e-awareness, pull (not push)
- Community building:
 enhance existing networks
 inclusion (not digital: inclusion)
 the problem of legitimacy and reputation inclusion, then development

The Knowledge Gap Hypothesis

The Internet multiplies

- Good students do better, bad ones do worst
- Engaged people become more active, disengaged become more disaffected/distracted

The extreme importance of accompanying measures, of the context, of the framework

- Beware of one laptop per person projects
- Beware of technology for the sake of it

Individuals and organizations in the IS

| Person Institution | Self-programmable | Generic | |
|-----------------------|--|---------------------------------------|-----------|
| Connected | Source of innovation and value creation | Executor | Exclusion |
| Disconnected | Diamond in the rough but invisible to networks | Structurally irrelevant to the system | |
| Inequality | | | |
